Black Panthers of the 1960s and 1970s built a militant struggle against racism, police brutality and poverty. They organized in prisons as well as on the outside, leading the prisoners' rebellion at Attica. Government repression targeted Panthers and dozens were murdered by the FBI. Hundreds were imprisoned, some still behind bars today. Come hear the voices of former Panthers and the legacy of the movement for the fight against the death penalty, criminal injustice and for civil rights today.
