In celebration of true revolutionaries

by Malaika H Kambon

A now famous quote from Ernesto Che Guevara says, “At the risk of sounding ridiculous, the true revolutionary is guided by great feelings of love.”

The legacy of the Black Panther Party for Self-Defense has proven this repeatedly, even though the city in which the party was born continues to shower those who struggle within her boundaries with the most heinous disrespect.

Repeated murders of her youth by brutal Chief of Police Harold Jordan and the Oakland Police Department echo the very police brutality against which the Black Panther Party fought in the ‘60s and ‘70s.

The City of Oakland now even brazenly decrees that we, her battered and abused grassroots, must stay off the grass in front of City Hall so that it will “grow in healthy,” after soaking up the blood, sweat and tears of the Occupy Movement that was forcibly evicted by means of brazen police brutality.

It’s as if Oakland’s city government continued its audacious mockery of her own citizenry in even this small way – by means of silly “Keep Off the Grass” signs – as some of the true revolutionaries of Oakland, the Black Panther Party and Oakland’s poor communities and communities of color celebrated the 46th anniversary of the Black Panther Party in a space that used to be free to all – but is now guarded by sentry fences, warning signs, and imminent police threat – during October’s Black Panther Party History Month in 2012.

Yet in spite of the shroud of infamy that Mayor Jean Quan’s appalling mismanagement hangs in canoppy as a monument to ineptitude over the city of Oakland, the spirits of fallen ancestor revolutionaries such as Steve Biko of South Africa, Patrice Lumumba of the Congo, Papalol Boukm of Haiti, Che Guevara of Cuba and many more were a cleansing force for this most important of annual Black Panther known as Rafal, and his growing young son. Refal is a first generation master writer, hip hop poet-African artist, muralist and illustrator, a member of the Oakland Maroons group of artists and co-curators of the group’s first major art exhibition, “First Love.”

Throughout the month of October in cities and states across the country and in countries around the world, the story of the Black Panther Party will be renewed and revered. Examples of this can be seen in events that have already taken place, in continuing events and in events yet to be:

- The It’s About Time Black Panther Party Legacy Committee and Underground Books in Sacramento hosted film showings of “Lords of the Revolution,” “Merritt College, Home of the Panthers” and historical footage of the BPP, along with the book signings of Elbert “Big Man” Howard’s “The Panthers on the Prowl,” Steve McCutchen’s “We Were Free For Awhile,” Mia Sia Gilbert’s “Twirl in Smoke” and Aaron Dixon’s “My People Are Rising.” Members of Sacramento’s BPP chapter spoke, as did community activists and spoken word artists.

- The 2012 Oregon Shakespeare Festival, held in Ashland, Oregon, featured the play entitled “Party People.” Written and performed by members of New York’s phenomena theatrical group Universes (Steven Sapp, Mildred Ruiz Sapp, William Ruiz, aka Ninja), the new play “digs into the legacy of the Black Panthers and the Young Lords with a high-energy, infectious mix of theatre, poetry, jazz, blues, hip-hop, boleros and salsa.”

- Berkeley’s Amoeba Music on Telegraph Avenue in Berkeley boasts one of the finest exhibits of Black Panther Party photographs in the Northern California Bay Area. In June 16, Amoeba Music had a booth set up with what would have been Tupac Shakur’s 41st birthday.

- The legendary Black Panther Party Minister of Culture Emory Douglas will be in residency at Edolo in Chiaspa, Mexico, in November 2012. While there he will participate with Zapatista artists and other cultural workers to build art between Zapatista and the Black Panther Party. Together, they will develop the newsletter Zapateria.

And though the crowd was relatively small, the love and warmth was huge as four generations of Panthers and the struggling Oakland residents they’ve served since
Survey questionnaire from the P

This survey questionnaire is being presented to the community for the purpose of making a qualitative assessment of the CDCR's mail policies and practices in relation to prisoners and our families' First Amendment constitutional right to send and receive mail and our 14th Amendment constitutional right to be provided with adequate notice of the reasons for our mail being stopped or disallowed, so that we can have the opportunity to be meaningfully heard as to why our mail is being stopped or disallowed.

The data gathered from this survey will be utilized as material evidence in an ongoing case aimed at obtaining a permanent injunction in court. The injunction would enjoin CDCR's Prison Intelligence Unit (PIU) and Institutional Gang Investigators (IGI) from arbitrarily accusing prisoners, our families and law abiding citizens of the free community of promoting gang activity via the mail that prisoners are sending to and receiving from our members of the free community.

Therefore, it would be greatly appreciated if the community could take a few minutes to answer the following questions:

Questions for prisoners:
1. What prison are you in?
2. How long have you been in this prison?
3. Have you ever had your incoming mail or outgoing mail stopped or disallowed on the grounds of allegedly promoting gang activity? If yes, did you receive a "Stopped Mail Notice" and/or a "Mail Disallowal Notice"?
4. If you have had your mail stopped or disallowed, did the reasons listed on the "Stopped Mail Notice" and/or a "Mail Disallowal Notice" provide you with a specific explanation as to how you were allegedly promoting gang activity? Or was the explanation vague?
5. Since the year 2006, how many "Stopped Mail Notices" and/or "Mail Disallowal Notices" have you received as a prisoner?
6. If you have ever had your

These are but a few examples of the continuing legacy of the Black Panther Party for Self-Defense, a party rich with stories of their positive development and commitment to enrich the quality of life of struggling communities everywhere. For they stood and spoke truth to power, despite the deprivations of mainstream media and J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI’s COINTELPRO (counterintelligence) program – once labeling the nascent Black Panther Party “the greatest threat to the internal security of the country” for doing nothing more than empowering the African American community and, by example, other poor communities and communities of color worldwide.

To this day, tenants of the original Black Panther Party 10-Point Program – What We Want remain just as relevant in 2012 as they were yesterday in the 1960s. Thus, it is important that we do not forget that the Black Panther Party and, later, the Black Liberation Army were part of a revolution.

So it wasn’t so much about the quantity of people who were present at the BPP celebration but the quality of love and commitment that was present.

Thus, the words of rappers S Dot Venom and Esebiio the Automatic rocked young and old out of any complacency about life they may have formerly entertained.

And the conch shell that Brotha Cliff of the Caribbean All Stars blew along with the small red and gold trumpet brought home the reality of the Maafa that brought us here, the holocaust that persists, and the fact that struggle continues. The versatility with which his fingers roamed a 10 octave double keyboard brought joy; the soul of Trinidadian guitarist strummed a base guitar that beat like a giant heart thumping through the crowd up through the soul of the cement.

As Hugh Sweetfoot drummed on traps and Ron blazed a new day on a second guitar, Cliff’s clear vocals, Bajekte’s tenor sax and Raul Gomez’ accompanying percussion
